MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence

FROM:

[Redacted]
Acting Director, Public Affairs OfficeSUBJECT: Invitation to Address the Thirteenth Annual National Collegiate Security Conference

1. Action Requested: Accept or decline invitation to give the keynote address to the Thirteenth Annual National Collegiate Security Conference (NCSC) on the evening of the 17th, 18th, or 19th of October at Gaston Hall, Georgetown University.

2. Background: Mr. Edward A. Frazier, Secretary-General of the Thirteenth NCSC, has invited you to give the keynote address on defense or foreign policy issues. The suggested format is 30 minutes of remarks and 30 minutes of questions and answers. Some 800-1000 students of foreign policy and public service, primarily from East Coast colleges, are expected to attend.

The NCSC is student-run. Once a year they gather to simulate a foreign affairs crisis. The students play the roles of various U.S. national leaders and experience what it is like to manage a fast-breaking diplomatic and defense problem. Foreign nationals who are students at the universities sending delegations to the Conference may attend. According to the secretary, THE WASHINGTON POST would cover the event. Previous speakers have been former Ambassador to the U.N. Donald McHenry, Dean of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service Peter Crow, and former Secretary General of the U.N. Kurt Waldheim. (See opposite brochure and letterhead for list of counselors.)

3. Recommendation: Last year you declined an invitation to address this group. Since you have already accepted an invitation to address the Center for Strategic & International Studies at Georgetown University on 14 October, you may wish to defer this invitation to the DDCI who has also been approached to give the keynote address. However, the probability of foreign nationals and media being present makes this an unlikely audience for either you or the DDCI to address.

Dear Mr. McMahon:

On behalf of the Thirteenth Annual National Collegiate Security Conference (NCSC XIII) sponsored by the Georgetown International Relations Association, I am pleased to invite you to deliver the keynote address on October 17, 18, or 19, 1985.

College students from around the country will be participating as delegates to NCSC XIII. For four days these politically aware individuals will have the opportunity to serve as foreign ministers or United Nations Ambassadors. Operating around a crisis management center, the NCSC simulation presents realistic crises that the assembled "world leaders" must address and resolve in accordance with their national policies and goals.

While I appreciate your busy schedule, particularly at this time, I sincerely hope that you will be able to give this keynote at Georgetown University. The audience will be 800-1000 active and knowledgeable college students. An address on select defense or foreign policy issues would be a profitable experience for the participants and would serve to enhance the NCSC XIII program.

Again, Mr. McMahon, we would be greatly honored by your attendance at this major event at Georgetown University.

Sincerely,

Edward A. Frazier
Secretary-General
